

National Severe Weather Warning Service

Chief Forecasters Assessment

Another depression is expected to move northeastwards bringing periods of heavy rain across southwest England and Wales. This is not expected to be as widespread as on Saturday and there are also some uncertainties with the location and intensity of the heaviest rainfall. Accumulations of 10-20 mm seem likely, with the risk of 30-40 mm locally on high ground. Even with accumulations in the lower category, this could bring further flooding, especially to parts of southwest England which were hard hit on Saturday.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 13:00 on Sun, 25th Nov 2012 until 23:59 on Sun, 25th Nov 2012

After a drier interlude, further heavy rain is expected to affect the area during Sunday afternoon and evening. Given existing levels of saturation, the public should be aware of the risk of localised flooding.
